

Early Childhood Education

The early childhood education stage is divided into two cycles. The first cycle is for children up to the age of three, and the second cycle is for children from three to six years of age.

Attention will be focused progressively over the two cycles of early childhood education on:

- emotional development,
- emotional management,
- habits of movement and control of the body,
- communication and language,
- the norms of coexistence and social relations, as well as the discovery of the environment, the living beings that coexist in it and the physical and social characteristics of the environment in which they live,
- values
- responsible and sustainable consumption
- and the promotion of health.

In addition, it will allow girls and boys to develop a positive, balanced and equal image of themselves and to acquire personal autonomy.
